New York November Crop Production

ALBANY, NY --- The USDA-NASS has released the crop production forecast for November, according to Donnie Fike, state statistician of the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), New York Field Office. The latest survey, which was conducted during the last week of October and first week of November, included the following commodities:

Corn: Production is forecast at 86.3 million bushels, down 520 thousand bushels from the October forecast but up slightly from 2019. Based on conditions as of November 1, yields are expected to average 166.0 bushels per acre, down one bushel from the October forecast but 8 bushels above the 2019 average. If realized, this would be the highest yield on record for New York. Area harvested for grain is forecast at 520 thousand acres, unchanged from the October forecast but down 5% from 2019.

Soybean: Production is forecast at 15.0 million bushels, unchanged from October but up 39% from last year. Based on November 1 conditions, yields are expected to average 50.0 bushels per acre, unchanged from last month but up 2 bushels from last year. Area for harvest is forecast at 300 thousand acres, unchanged from last month but up 75 thousand from last year.

Production forecasts are released on a monthly basis and do not reflect final production estimates. Fall harvests may change these estimates considerably. The next production forecast will be issued December 10, 2020.
